

Evidence Map

On the following evidence map, the red dot is the central incident in your story and each ring represents locations where evidence of your story might exist, in decreasing proximity from the central incident. For instance, in the building-collapse story, one piece of evidence on the inner ring might be that an eye-witness shot a video of the collapse with her phone, while a piece of evidence on the outer ring might be that an official in Washington DC wrote a report about the incident.

Using the graphic below, create a six-item evidence map for "The School beneath the Wave..." List your items beneath the graphic or on a separate document.

